Corruption Committee.

For years past occasional hints from Washington, not at all complimentary to the integrity of honorable members, have appeared in the public press. They became more and more common, until at last they were so definite and tangible as to call for investigation. The result implicated four members of Congress, and convicted one or two of every equitable practice, to say the very least; and it would be too much charity to suppose that four only have been guilty. Perhaps others have the merit of hiding better than their colleagues. We don't believe that the evil has extended to any large proportion of Congressmen; but it is mortifying to be forced to the conclusion that any one entrusted with such responsibility should betray his trust, and sell his votes for gain. Formerly, officials entrusted with public money sometimes yielded to the temptation of using it, and came out defaulter; but this was not surprising. A constant handling of money was a perpetual temptation, which proved too strong for common virtue. A wise man once observed, that perhaps Judas would not have been a traitor if he had not carried the purse. But that Legislators should vote for gain, instead of the public good, or sell their influence and their votes for money, is a much graver matter. A change has taken place. Office-holders, during the present administration, have received and disbursed, or kept the public money with fidelity; not a dollar has been lost by defalcations; but the corruption has assailed a different class of public agents. There is a reason for this, without supposing the times have degenerated, and that men have grown worse than they formerly were; and the reason is obvious. The Federal Government has engaged in a profligate course of expenditures for what are called internal improvements. It has been found easy to get an appropriation from Congress for any object that could muster friends enough to besiege the capitol at Washington. It is idle to remonstrate. Even a President's veto cannot arrest a bill that carries millions along with it. An object is never wanting, and its advocates are numerous and wealthy. The old guard of the Democratic party have always remonstrated, but they have not had the power to resist effectually this sort of prodigality; and the end is not. We still have countless millions of acres of land, and an overbearing treasury. There are fine opportunities to make a great deal of money, and such opportunities will not pass unimproved. If the tide of corruption is to be stopped, put an end to this course of profligate legislation. It was never designed that the Federal Government should engage in such business. It was not made for such a purpose. The necessity out of which this Union sprang was not the necessity for public improvements. These could be made without it. Lately, however, if a man shows himself a little fastidious in voting away the public money or property, to make a road or improve the navigation of a river, he is an abomination; not up with the times. He is an enemy to internal improvements, and any profiteering demagogue can beat him for a seat in Congress. This vice in legislation has produced its legitimate fruit—venality and corruption. We must remove the fountain if we would stop the stream. Here are the opportunities and temptations. It will not do to present constantly to men such golden opportunities.

Another species of legislation becoming more and more common, is deleterious to public morals; not only in Congress, but elsewhere. Old claims, that improve by age, and whose merit is in proportion to their magnitude, afford excellent chances for speculation. Bounties to soldiers, urged by appeals to the gratitude of the country, turn out to be bounties to thousands of speculators, who make their per cent out of all such bills. The revenue laws have been shaped to put money into the pockets of capitalists, and the subject is seldom broached in Congress without attracting to Washington an interested and mercenary lobby. A small percent more on sugar or cotton puts millions more in well filled purses. Happily for us, we have got rid of a National Bank, and its unlimited means of corruption; and we have not yet allowed the Federal Government to gilds into the bottomless abyss of a general system of internal improvement. Let the lesser means of corruption, however, have time to operate, and they will attract their kind of greater magnitude.

We see no remedy for the evil but in a sound public opinion. Let the people watch with jealousy this tendency to profligate legislation. Require a candidate to account for appropriations of land and money, that are made with so much facility in these latter days. Let us try at least, to get back to the economy of earlier times. It is true, that it is popular to preach economy, but the member of Congress who attempts to practice on such preaching, when bills for squandering treasures on bounties, or internal improvements, or old worthless claims come up will be left at home next time, by way of illustrating what the popular clamor for economy means. Still, this profligate and unconstitutional legislation must be stopped, sooner or later, when its beautiful effects will be seen and felt, and then the remedy will be applied. It is high time now; but if we must have more disgraceful scenes at Washington, they will come in due time, if the present policy is pursued.

The editor of the organ has paraded again a Frossell letter of 1849, written by Fitch, recently elected to the United States Senate from Indiana. The limitation act has disposed of that long since. Fitch can plead bad raising, like the editor of the organ himself. Mr. Fillmore once wrote just such a letter; but when the responsibility fell upon him, he forgot his letter. Fitch has long since repudiated these opinions, and could not have been elected to the Senate by the Democracy of Indiana, if he had not been well understood on this point. The issue, as well as the political views of thousands have changed since 1849, and it is idle to quote them now, when not confirmed by recent declarations and acts, but on the other hand, notoriously retracted and condemned.

We see that the New York Herald is quite complimentary toward the President and the new Cabinet. What mean things have been done, the President may be disposed to inquire, that commendation should come from such a quarter. It is probably, however, that Bennett is only making an overture for spoils; or, having failed to weather the storm successfully, has concluded to turn weathercock, and show the direction of the breeze. It remains to be seen if the good opinion of the Herald will not be more injurious to the President than its opposition.

The Inauguration.—The inauguration of James Buchanan and John C. Breckinridge to-day, will compose one of the most splendid pageants in the history of similar events in this country. The ceremony will be witnessed by the clergyman, still more to modernize the text, suggested, in ridicule, the following climax:

"Oh may our hearts be tuned within,
Like David's harp of solemn sound."

Submitted to his minister the following:

"Oh may our hearts be tuned within,
Like Uncle David's sacred violin."

A chorister, wishing to improve on the lines—

"Oh may our hearts go DIDDLE DIDDLE,

when the clergyman, still more to modernize the text, suggested, in ridicule, the following climax:

"Oh may our hearts go DIDDLE DIDDLE,
Like Uncle David's sacred violin."

The last improvement so excelled that of the chorister, as to induce him to be content, without further experiments, with the original text.

LOUISVILLE AND PORTLAND RAILROAD

INCREASED ACCOMMODATIONS.

TEN MINUTES LINE BY DAY.

Half Hour Line at Night.

The patrons of the Louisville and Portland Railroad, are respectfully notified that hereafter the Cars and Omnibuses on this line will leave their respective stations during the business of the day, every ten minutes, instead of every fifteen minutes, as heretofore.

They are also hereby informed, that hereafter the Cars and Omnibuses will run at night, a car starting from Portland and one from Twelfth street, every 30 minutes. The Omnibuses connecting with the night Cars, will start from the Galt House, instead of Brook street, every 30 minutes.

The managers of the line hope by these enlarged accommodations, to give better satisfaction to the public, and thereby increase the patronage heretofore extended to them.

The fare upon both night and day lines will be heretofore; for through passengers to Portland, ten cents.

No charge for carpet-bags. For obvious reasons, persons having complimentary tickets will be required to pay the night line.

mf d6 JAS. H. DENNIS, Sup't.

IT We all remember the anecdote illustrative of the slow time made on an Indian rail road. A gentleman on foot was passing a train under way when the conductor halted the car, and asked the pedestrian if he wouldn't ride.

The pedestrian thanked the conductor for his politeness, but excused himself by saying that he was in a hurry, and must go on. It is a fair inference that the time over that road was slow or that the man was rather fast on foot. A gentleman approached the depot of the L. & R. railroad a day or two ago in a carriage a few moments after the train started. The train was there four squares from the depot when the gentleman dismounted, and those who are best acquainted with Capt. Richardson's go ahead probabilities need not be told that he followed the time table on all occasions. The belated traveler threw the hackman the amount of his fare, and told the bystanders that it was his intention to catch "that thing," pointing at the retreating train, and the large assemblage about the depot was anxious to see how he would do it. He started out at a gait which would have done credit to the "American Deer," and as the speed of the cars was enhanced the efforts of the pursued were increased. Spectators became more and more excited asthe "foot-passenger" reduced the distance between himself and the train, and they were gratified to see him mount the platform in the rear of the departing train, when he turned about and waved a red bandana, to the admiration of the lookers-on.

THE CONSPIRING AFFAIR.—The Journal had considerable trouble for two or three days past about an exclusive item relating to an attempt on the part of a female from Portland to conspire a young gentleman in Sixth street in this city. One day the paper tells us that "a lady came up from Portland for the avowed purpose of coining a young man," and again we are informed that "the statement to the effect that a lady had come to the city to coinate a young man was entirely incorrect." It is impossible to imagine what version the paper will give the affair to day. As there is likely to be a doubt in the public mind in reference to the matter until the Democrat speaks out, we had as well put an end to anxiety at once. A married lady living in Portland did come to Louisville on Friday last with the design of inflicting personal chastisement upon a young gentleman in Sixth street, and was only deterred from the attempt by the interference of a third party. The affair should not prejudice the young gentleman in the least, as his offense was altogether imaginary.

CAUGHT AGAIN.—Nathaniel Gray, who had only just been released from the work-house a day or two before, relapsed immediately into old habits, and was picked up near the corner of Third and Market streets, Monday evening, in a high state of intoxication. He was before the Police Court yesterday morning, and Judge Johnson sent him out to work in the city quarry three months.

IT Matthew Finn, one of the men who applied for admission to the jail Monday night, created a disturbance because the accommodation was withheld, and got in sure enough in the natural way. He was brought before the Police Court yesterday morning for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and was sent to the work-house a couple of months.

IT We stated yesterday that Jane Henderson, with her two little children, was found up-town in a state of great destitution, the mother being drunk. They were brought before the police court yesterday morning, when the woman was sent to the work-house and the children to the almshouse.

IT Major Hawley, in charge of the U. S. recruiting station in this city, is making frequent enlistments for the regular service. They are sent forward to the Newport Barracks as rapidly as they are enrolled.

THE REMAINS OF DR. KANE.—The remains of Dr. Kane, on the steamer Woodford, passed Hickman, Ky., yesterday morning. He will probably not reach this city before to-morrow or Thursday morning.

IT The School Board of Cincinnati on Monday, after the adjournment of its regular session, held a special session at which suitable resolutions were passed in tribute to the memory of Dr. Kane.

IT The steam-boatsmen of Cincinnati have had a meeting to make arrangements for joining in the reception of the remains of Dr. Kane. They have determined to join the procession in a body.

THE STEAMER DAVID WHITE.—This favorite steamer arrived yesterday from New Orleans. We are indebted to Mr. Frank O'Bryan, one of her attentive clerks, for papers and favors.

IT The attorney for Thomas J. O'Neal, security for Star Davis, made a motion in police court yesterday to set aside the bond. The motion will be argued on the 14th inst.

IT At the city election in Newport, Ky., on Monday last, the Democratic party elected all of their ticket, except two Councilmen, by a large majority of 150.

IT The "National Gun-squad," of this city, have volunteered to fire a salute on the occasion of Mr. Secretary Guthrie's reception in this city.

DESTRUCTION OF THE PEACHES.—The Glasgow Journal says that the peach crop in that region has been entirely destroyed by the last frost.

A LARGE ORDER.—The Illinois Central Railroad Company has contracted for the delivery, next season, of 66 locomotives and 800 cars.

DR. RAY'S COFFEE BOILERS.—In this age of invention, in which almost every day brings up something new, we have adopted the rule that we will regard every new invention as a humbug, until ample experience and repeated trial shall have proved its virtue. Some two weeks ago Dr. Ray presented us with one of his Coffee Boilers, requesting us to try it. We promptly declined to do so, believing his invention to be worthless. He sat his boiler upon our desk, saying, "I believe that this boiler will save nearly one-half the entire expense of tea and coffee, and at the same time make a better beverage than can be made without it." If I said he, "I am correct in this, everybody ought to have one; if I am mistaken, everybody ought to know it. Take this home and try it, and tell your readers just what you honestly think of it." His confidence in his invention, and the fair opportunity he had thus given us to expose what we thought to be an imposition, induced us to take it home; and now, after submitting the boiler to actual trial, we are compelled to say that it is worthy of all the merit that its inventor claims for it. We think that every housekeeper ought to have one, or two—they are just as useful for tea as coffee.

WHO IS TO BE MAYOR?—For the information of those fast editors, who it is fair to presume, carry no extra weight in this community (elder accidental or otherwise), we present to you Sir Giacomo Mechi for having so well carried out the works designed by the architect Poletti, for the erection of the monumental column of the Immaculate Conception. Catholic Telegraph.

IT Two delegates from Newport Barracks, who had been caught and bound, were fifty dollars rewarded with twenty-five, and fifty lashes each, on the bare back, and well laid on. Flog—Steady.
